Collective Bargaining Under Attack Again

Lawmakers are again eyeing another group of public employees to strip collective bargaining rights from. This time it’s the faculty at the state’s six public universities. In November, Speaker of the House Mark Mickelson (R) Sioux Falls, announced that he was bringing legislation to prohibit collective bargaining for higher ed faculty. Last year, Mickelson led the charge to remove collective bargaining rights from those who work at the four technical institutes. This year the college professors are his target.

Mickelson cites his frustration over attempts to move the University of South Dakota School of Law from Vermilion to Sioux Falls. Mickelson claims one of the main obstacles to moving the school is instructors who are unwilling to commute to Sioux Falls to teach classes and the collective bargaining agreement and tenure that allows them to do that. The problem with Speaker Mickelson’s claim is that the law school faculty are not included in the bargaining unit and already not allowed to bargain.

South Dakota Education Association (SDEA) President Mary McCorkle urges all members of SDEA to get involved with this legislative fight because it won’t be long before legislators go after the K-12 employees as well. “We know last year, Speaker Mickelson went after the employees at the technical institutes. This year he is taking aim at the university faculty. Next year, it may be all public-school employees,” said McCorkle. “When lawmakers silence the voice of our fellow educators, it diminishes the voice of all of us. What happens to one of us happens to all of us. We all need to stand up together to say no more.”

Along with silencing the voice of educators, SDEA Council of Higher Education (COHE) members say a ban on collective bargaining, and perhaps tenure, will exacerbate the problem the six campuses already have in recruiting and retaining faculty. “South Dakota is already competing with other high caliber universities in our neighboring states. If you tell prospective applicants that they will not have a say in the policies that impact how they will interact with their students or how they will conduct their research and that they may not have the opportunity to earn academic tenure, they will probably look elsewhere,” said COHE President and University of South Dakota Professor Alan Aldrich. “COHE sees collective bargaining as our faculty’s way of communicating with the Board of Regents on what we think is needed for our six campuses and, more importantly, what is needed to provide a world class academic experience for students and the development of research that enriches both students and our state economy.”

All for One and One for All

A year ago, in this edition of the Advocate, I wrote about the change in the political climate facing us. A new US Secretary of Education with no experience working in public schools and who does not support them, an anti-union climate, and the concern about the nominee for the Supreme Court. I encouraged you to become involved, to use your voice and to fight for our students and our public schools.

A year has passed and we have seen the result of politics working against the middle class, working against families, our students, and our schools. Here at home during the 2017 session, we watched as SD Legislature voted overwhelmingly to strip those who work at our four technical institutes of the right to bargain collectively. The question remains did we miss an opportunity to really raise all of our collective voices together.

I have always believed that SDEA’s strength—our strength—lies in what we can do together and the belief that we are powerful together. One of my favorite novels is Alexander Dumas’ The Three Musketeers and this quote: “All for one and one for all, united we stand divided we fall.” During the 2018 Legislative Session this MUST be what we deeply believe and how we act.

Our SDEA COHE brothers and sisters—that those teach in our six public universities, will be facing an attack on their collective bargaining rights. There is no SDEA member who should remain neutral in the face of this attack. An attack on one of us is an attack on all of us; united we must stand or we will fail, and collective bargaining for COHE and then for K-12 will be gone, and public education in South Dakota will never be the same.

In 2018, every member voice must be loudly raised to support our COHE colleagues. We cannot let what happened in 2017 happen again. We must fight this together. It is not “their” fight; it is OUR fight. Let us never say we stood by and watched while our COHE members lost their rights. Who will defend K-12 bargaining rights if we stand by and watch our colleagues lose theirs and a union-busting philosophy becomes the legislative norm?

Power is the capacity or ability to direct or influence the behavior of others or the course of events. Power does not wait for permission; power does not exist in isolation or in the hands of one or two or ten. It does not lie in the hands of the SDEA President or the SDEA Lobbyists. Power lies in the hands of the 6200 members of the South Dakota Education Association. It is only when we take charge of our power that we make a difference. Power unused is power wasted.

Now more than ever every single one of you are needed on the battle line. Will you take your power and use it for our common beliefs? Let us stand united, go forth and lead the way.

LOBBY DAYS

South Dakota’s Educators need your voice at the State Capitol. Whether it’s threats to collective bargaining or the looming budget crisis, lawmakers need to see and hear from you. SDEA is sponsoring five legislative days during the 2018 Legislative Session. Each of the five day is set aside for one of the Unionserv regions. However, if that date doesn’t work for you, consider joining us during one of the other days. To learn more or to register, visit our website at SDEA.org.

Professional Development Trainings

Train the Trainers event for I Can Do It/Classroom Management

SDEA is pleased to offer a Train the Trainers event for I Can Do It/Classroom Management on February 2-3, 2018 at the SDEA office in Pierre. There is room for 12 members to participate in this opportunity.

Members who wish to become a trainer of other early career or veteran educators in effective classroom management strategies should apply. The trainers may train in their own district, or at other trainings set up through SDEA around the state at school in-service trainings, or as regional SDEA- or local-sponsored trainings. Trainers will train in pairs. SDEA understands that release time from school is at the discretion of district administration, but with trainings also scheduled in the summer, during the evening, or on a weekend, our expectation is that all trainers will make every effort to train at least once per year. The ideal candidates will also possess a natural ability to engage and interact with adult learners. Trainers will be able to receive a training stipend plus expenses for future trainings they conduct. If these parameters are acceptable to you, then you are an ideal candidate.

Training will include exposure to the training materials and notes, adult learning style best practices, quality control expectations for SDEA training, SDEA support system, and time to work, plan and practice.

Beyond the 11 hours described above, two additional hours will be allowed for assignment/material prep for trainers. Trainers will also select an hour-long segment of the training and do a practice training with a group of volunteers in their district. A final hour-long webinar to review prep and answer questions and provide additional support will be scheduled in March. These 15 hours will be available for either a graduate credit through USF or 15 CEU hours. The cost for graduate credit is $45 and a link to register online through USF will be provided closer to the start of the training.

SDEA will provide lodging for Friday night based on double occupancy (or members can pay $20 to have their own room). Trainers will receive a $250 stipend for taking this training. SDEA will also provide supper on Friday evening and lunch on Saturday.

Zwaschka Receives 2018 SDEA Teacher of Excellence

PIERRE – The South Dakota Education Association (SDEA) has named Spearfish Chemistry Teacher, Jessica Zwaschka, its 2018 SDEA Teacher of Excellence. Zwaschka will also be nominated for the NEA Foundation’s Awards for Teaching Excellence. Educators selected for this award have demonstrated outstanding professional practice, association advocacy, community engagement and leadership in professional development. “Jessica has a true passion for her students and profession. She shares her love of science and chemistry by creating a classroom that is full of energy and hands on learning. Jessica doesn’t wait for the students to come to her; she reaches out to them at an early age. She created Slime Day, which brings together kindergartners and high school juniors to teach that it’s never too early to learn science. “I am sure she has sparked many future chemists with her creativity,” said SDEA President Mary McCorkle. “Jessica is caring, creative, dedicated, and a true advocate for her students and the profession she loves.” Zwaschka surprised and humbled by the award. “It was a fun surprise. It’s nice to be recognized for the work we do. I was humbled and excited to receive this award. I have amazing colleagues at Spearfish High School and in our local SEA chapter and anytime we’re recognized for our successes, it’s great for us and the profession as a whole,” wrote Zwaschka. “I enjoy working with my chemistry students and the younger students in my summer science camps. Building relationships and developing a love of science is what it’s all about.”

Zwaschka is a graduate of Wingate University with a degree in biology, chemistry and education. She has taught 20 of her 26 years at Spearfish High School. She taught for five years in South Carolina before her family moved to South Dakota. Zwaschka and her husband, Mark, have two children Alexandria and Zach. The NEA Foundation Awards for Teaching Excellence recognize, reward, and promote excellence in teaching and advocacy for the association. The awards are jointly presented by the NEA Foundation and the NEA. Along with a $1,000 grant from SDEA, Zwaschka will receive a trip to the NEA Foundation’s 2018 Salute to Excellence in Education Gala in Washington DC. Five awardees are selected for The Horace Mann Awards for Teaching Excellence and receive $10,000. The NEA Member Benefits Award for Teaching Excellence recipient, selected from the five, receives $25,000 cash.

Aldrich echoes President McCorkle’s sentiments that this is a fight all public education employees need to engage in. “Collective bargaining is not a higher education issue nor a K-12 issue. It is an education issue that impacts each of us,” said Aldrich. “Please be ready and willing to take action when asked, including communicating with your legislators about the importance of having a voice in the workplace and of your contributions as an educator, as a researcher, and as a community member. Losing collective bargaining would be bad for South Dakota and bad for our students.”

Revenue Struggles Lead to No Proposed Increase for Education

State lawmakers are getting ready to travel to Pierre for the 2018 Legislative Session, but they do so knowing they will be dealing with budget challenges. Governor Dennis Daugaard outlined the state’s budget woes in his annual budget address earlier in December. A struggling farm economy, coupled with a loss of revenue from online sales, is leading to anemic revenue growth and a $30 million-dollar budget shortfall for the current fiscal year. While cuts are not on the table yet, Governor Daugaard is proposing to freeze spending for public schools, however, he is proposing $20 million dollars for an expected growth in the state’s enrollment.

Should legislators adopt Governor Daugaard’s budget, schools would face the second year of little or no increase in state aid to education. President Mary McCorkle worries the revenue woes could eventually erase the progress made after the legislature increased the sales tax in 2016. “The half-penny increase to the sales tax was a boost for schools and led to significant salary increases for teachers, however, if schools don’t continue to see state support grow, we will lose ground to our neighboring states and be back where we started,” said McCorkle. “While SDEA was not surprised by the Governor’s budget numbers, we were hoping for a slight increase to at least keep us moving forward.”

McCorkle says K-12 public school funding is not the only area of state government facing the prospect of no new state support. Community service providers, Medicaid, higher education and state employees are also looking at no increases. State employees are facing the second year without a proposed salary increase. This means there will be a lot of competition for any additional money lawmakers find in the budget. “While SDEA wants to get the best deal possible for funding, we also know that there are other areas of state government that need funding because they provide services for our students and their families,” said McCorkle. “In the past, some legislators have used the state’s budget shortfalls to divide and conquer the separate groups who rely on state support. That led to everyone struggling. If we are going to keep moving forward, we must work together with our partners in healthcare, the community based providers, higher education and other sectors to find solutions for the long-term revenue challenges.”

SDEA members can make a difference by getting involved. “We did tremendous work in 2016, but that wasn’t the end. We still have work to do. We have to communicate with our local legislators as much as possible and we have to communicate with those service providers who serve our students as well,” said McCorkle. “Let’s find out what they need and figure out how we can work together to serve our students’ needs. We must work together with our community. The future of our students is at stake.”

My name is Tess Canet. I am a member of the Todd County EA and currently the president. I am also a member of the SDEA board of directors. I joined TCEA/SDEA/NEA the first year of my teaching career in 1997. I joined because I knew it was an organization of my peers, who would give me support and encouragement when I needed it. As a member of the TCEA/SDEA/NEA, I have a voice — locally, state-wide and nationally. My voice is heard through political action such as lobbying for better learning conditions for students and better working conditions for employees of Public Education. There is power in numbers!

NEA’s Read Across America Activity Ideas

Seuss-themed reading parties are the celebration of choice for many of the millions of participants in NEA’s Read Across America. While you can’t beat the combination of birthday cake, Dr. Seuss titles and guest readers wearing the Cat’s traditional red and white striped stovepipe hat, if you’re looking for more ways to celebrate, consider some of these tried and true ideas of NEA members.

Spirit Day for Reading

Door Décor
A school-wide door decorating activity gives everyone a chance to show enthusiasm for reading — from the kindergartners to the school nurse. Door décor can feature elements from favorite books or be totally Dr. Seuss themed. Get students involved by using photographs or student drawn self portraits embellished with Cat in the Hat hats, Thing 1 and Thing 2 blue hair, or notable features from other favorite Seuss characters. Don’t forget to include a reversible door hanger — Do Not Disturb, We’re Reading! Come In and READ with us!

Cook Up Some Reading Fun
Serve up some green eggs and ham on Read Across America Day or make these tasty toppers: Cat in the Hat pattern snacks! Provide kids with wooden skewers (or small straws) and red and white foods: bananas and strawberry slices, raspberries and mini marshmallows; red pepper and white cheese. Have kids alternate the red and white foods as they put them on the skewer then let them enjoy the snack as you read aloud.

A Chorus of Readers
It’s hard not to join in on a reading of a Dr. Seuss book. His inviting rhymes and rhythms are hard to resist! Reading aloud in unison with a whole class or large group is great reading motivation and helps build students’ fluency and self-confidence. Plan choral readings of Dr. Seuss titles for the classroom or school-wide assembly. Use a projector to display the books so everyone can see the book and read aloud.

Reading Buddies
Sharing what’s inside a book with younger kids is great fun for older readers. Pair students in early elementary grades with older readers from upper grades, middle or high school. Prepare older students to read aloud and work with your younger buddies on a reading related craft such as making bookmarks or writing books of their own.

Literary Field Trip
Plan a field trip to your local library or bookstore. Work with the librarian or bookseller to develop a guided experience for your students that includes time for both exploring and hearing books read aloud. Local libraries and museums also often host exhibitions that focus on children’s book authors and bookstores have authors for public readings and events. Take advantage of their efforts and offerings.

Online Reading Action
Bring readers and reading fun to kids through your Internet connection. The Skype an Author Network can help you plan a virtual visit with an author for a classroom or a school-wide assembly. With Google Lit Trips students can step into stories they’ve read and take the journeys of characters from famous literature on the surface of Google Earth. Or you can “Read Across America” with a video call to share a story with classroom or guest reader in another part of the country.

The Reading Challenge
Many schools use Read Across America Day to kick off a school-wide reading challenge. And there’s nothing like the promise of an adult to make a fool of himself/herself to inspire readers to read to great lengths. To make the reading challenge work, the challenge must be challenging, but doable, and the incentive, hilarious. Some themes to consider:

• Human Hot Fudge Sundae Challenge kids to read food-themed titles with the reward of turning an authority figure into dessert—a human sundae covered with chocolate syrup and whipped cream!
• Clowning Around: If kids meet the challenge of reading a certain number of humorous books, an authority figure dresses as a clown for a day.
• Looking Good!: Kids reading a remarkable number of books or minutes makes a remarkable change in and authority figure’s appearance: shave heads or beards, dye hair outlandish colors, wear costumes or unusual clothes, etc.
• Animal Love: Fill your challenge list with books about animals and have your authority figure kiss one (pig, snake, goat, cow, llama, yak) to reward readers for meeting the challenge.
• Fill Your Dance Card: The Cat in the Hat Ball has been a popular Read Across America activity for some NEA Higher Education members. Consider holding a Hat and Book Bop of your own! Boogie and browse books in the afternoon with younger students. Or hold a more formal evening affair for older readers—attire is dressy casual, with a hat!

Caught Red Hatted
Some kids long to sneak away and escape inside a book while others need encouragement. Boost book interest by awarding raffle tickets to students “caught” reading. Offer a fabulous Cat in the Hat hat, a bunch of green eggs and ham with the principal, and books as prizes. The Get Caught Reading campaign has more suggestions for catching readers.

Key Facts About NEA’s ESP Members

Every 5 years, the NEA conducts in-depth surveys of the ESP membership, both those employed in K-12 and Higher Education. Here are some key findings from the 2012 K-12 ESP study:
49% of all K-12 ESP members are paraeducators. Clerical services ESP are 18% of the membership, Custodial Services 17%, Food Services 12%, and Transportation Services 10%.
83% of K-12 ESP work full-time.
78% have their worksite located in a school building. The rest work in central offices, maintenance facilities, transportation, etc.
K-12 ESP are actively engaged in insuring the safety of students. They average 12.7 years in the ESP workforce, 85% plan to stay in their current employment.
ESP are formally trained in implementing their district’s anti-bullying policy. 75% of K-12 ESP live within the boundaries of the school districts in which they are employed.

Gordon Horgen Memorial Scholarship

The South Dakota Education Association/NEA is calling for applications for the Gordon Horgen Memorial Scholarship, which will be awarded to Native American students who are planning on entering the teaching profession, or are a college sophomore in a teacher education program. This scholarship was created by the 2014 Representative Assembly to honor the late Gordon Horgen from Winner. Visit www.sdea.org for guidelines and application forms.

Deadline: February 15, 2018

Ramia Boersma Memorial Scholarship

The South Dakota Education Association/NEA awards scholarships to outstanding high school seniors or college sophomores, who are planning on entering the teaching profession. The scholarship is open to children of members only. The Association may annually award up to three $750 scholarships for each academic year. Visit www.sdea.org for guidelines and application forms.

Thank you to the elementary students from Aberdeen, Deubrook, Norfeld Colony, Red Willow Colony, Iroquois and Stanley County Schools for providing all the school bus ornaments and one very creative garland. SDEA staff and members Barb Lindquist, Mary McCorkle, Lisa Jennings and Kim Soldatke had a great time decorating the tree at the South Dakota State Capitol.

Well colleagues, MMXVII is upon us! (MMXVII just flew by, didn’t it.) When this reaches you, the Legislature will be in session, with all that entails. You may rest assured SDEA will be working hard for education, teachers, and students. Hopefully, again, this year our efforts will be met with successes.

Happily, SDEA-Retired received a grant from NEA allowing us to offer three pre-retired seminars this spring. The dates and sites for the seminars have not been finalized. Probably one will be offered in Sioux Falls, one on the 24th of March at Minerva’s (near the Mall) in Rapid City and one on the 3rd of March in Watertown. As in the past, they will be offered on a Saturday to accommodate working teachers. Our time-tested format has been very well received every time we have held a seminar. Hopefully, SDEA-Retired will be working very well received every time we have offered the seminars. Keep an eye out for the dates and encourage any of your retired friends to attend.
